GOULD ELEVEN TRAVELS TO BUCKSPORT

The Gould Academy football squad will travel to Bucksport this week end for an inter-sectional match. Very few teams from the smaller schools of southwestern Maine travel into the Bangor area for competition, so this engagement will be more or less a comparison of teams from the two sections. Gould however is not one of the stronger teams of its section although they have improved and hope to make a good showing. On the other hand Bucksport has made a creditable showing in its class, although they do not seem to be as strong as last year's club. Last year Bucksport won 7-0 and the "Blue and Gold" would like to even up the count this year.

The Gould squad will leave Friday at noon and will be the guests of the Bucksport boys Friday night. Twenty men with their coaches and the School Doctor will make the trip.

The team is in good shape with the exception of those filling the fullback position. Both Lovejoy and Littlehale have rib injuries which are hampering them at present. Both hope, however, to be in there Saturday.

awarded the County 4-H Plaque to the Perkins Valley 4-H Club of South Woodstock, Evelyn Appleby, leader. The second high scoring club was the Busy Workers of Canton Point, led by J. C. Conant. This club won the plaque last year. The Co-Workers under the leadership of Mrs. Annie Garey placed third.

FARNSWORTH HOUSE DEDICATION NOTABLE EVENT LAST WEEK

In the presence of a large audience which included prominent educators of New England, sports writers and friends of the school, Gould Academy's spacious and completely equipped field house was dedicated as the Farnsworth House last Thursday morning. Students marched to the field house, led by the Academy band which played during the exercises.

The letter of presentation and dedication was read by Ellery C. Park, senior member of the Board of Trustees, and the acceptance speech was made by Paul C. Thurston, vice-president of the trustees. The principal speaker was Bill Cunningham of the Boston Herald staff, who stressed the importance of discipline, loyalty, determination, strength and the spirit of team play learned on the athletic field to American youth on the present world situation. Invaluable lessons in these things are learned on school athletic fields and in such buildings as the new Farnsworth House.

In closing, Cunningham congratulated the Academy on its building, congratulated its donors as men who have not only made a contribution to Gould Academy but to the Nation; and to the athletes he suggested that it is good to win, but good, also, to lose gracefully. In his presentation Mr. Park spoke briefly of the Academy's history; of the conscientiousness of

The church was filled to capacity, guests coming from Portland, Yarmouth, Pownal, Gray, New Gloucester, Auburn, Lewiston, Mechanic Falls, Turner, Buckfield, Canton, Norway, Milton, Bryant Pond, Poland Spring and Berlin, N. H.

Beautiful flowers adorned the church, gifts from the four auxiliaries of the church, personal friends, Granite Chapter O. E. S., and Ferry Beach Association.

Miss Forbes received letters of congratulation from the Universalist General Convention, Maine Universalist Convention, Ferry Beach Park Association and many friends.

Preceding the regular service five children were christened—Gordon Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Wardwell, Buckfield; Edward Harvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Blake, Berlin, N. H.; Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Allen, Bryant Pond; Elaine Elnora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Penley; and Lorraine Beverly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cummings.

Mrs. Arlene Farr sang a christening hymn. Following the christening service, Miss Mary Jacobson received the right hand of fellowship and welcome to church membership, coming from another church, and Miss Georgena Buck and Vernon Inman received the rite of baptism and united with the church.

Miss Forbes' subject was "The Harvest of the Years." The music was rendered by the church choir, Mrs. S. A. Farr, accompanist, and several soloists, as follows: There is a Resting Place, choir; solo, Faith and Patience, Miss Emma West, South Paris; Eye Hath Not Seen, Miss Ruth Clarke, Portland; Mrs. Elizabeth Perry of Buckfield, soprano solo, with Mrs. Elta Mitchell, accompanist. Reynold Chase's solo was "Close to the Heart of God," and Mrs. Clarence Coffin sang "Love's Rosary." Following the prayer by Miss Forbes the choir sang a Response written by her.

Miss Forbes was ordained at Gray Oct. 17, 1901. The late Rev. G. G. Hamilton, D. D., preached the ordination sermon and the late W. W. Hooper, Superintendent of Maine Universalist Churches, received her into the ministry.

She is a graduate of Hebron Academy and Bates College, and attended the Dresser School of Spiritual Healing in Boston. Since opening 40 years ago of the Ferry Beach Park School of Religious Education, she has attended every summer but one.

Civilian Defense in Maine

(A Report of Progress by Raymond T. Adams, State Coordinator for Civil Defense)

"I'm defending America! I'm neither a soldier, nor a sailor, nor a Flying Cadet, nor one of the Marines, but I'm doing my bit just the same." This should be the battle cry of every single civilian—man, woman and child—in these United States of America. The age does not matter! The station in life does not matter, BUT THE PLACE DOES NOT MATTER, BUT THE TIME IS NOW!

The Maine Civilian Defense Council, under the able leadership of our good Governor, has for the past few months been organizing, perhaps slowly, but steadily, for Civilian Defense. It has chosen leaders, or County Coordinators, in every county in the State for the purpose of first building up a fool-proof organization for the three most essential divisions, in the event disaster should strike—namely, Fire, Police, and Disaster Relief.

What has been done in regard to Fire and Police Protection. A complete survey of each community in the State has been made of all available equipment, which enables the state officials of the Maine Civilian Defense Council to ascertain at a moment's notice, what may be expected of each community in the way of defense. Both divisions have a complete set-up of state, county and municipal chairmen. Many volunteer reserve units of both divisions are already organized, and weekly training schools are being conducted. These reserves are ready to augment the regular forces in guarding public utility plants directing traffic, etc.

For the past five or six weeks, the various fire and police departments in our State have been sending capable leaders to the School of Chemical Warfare at Edgewood Arsenal, in Maryland, which instructs these men in incendiary, high explosive, and gas defense.

A local Volunteer Office has been established at the store of D. Grover Brooks with Mrs. Alice J. Brooks as Chairman of the Volunteer Placement Bureau. Registration Cards for both men and women are with Mrs. Brooks and every man and woman are urged to register for some part in this Defense Program.

Upon their return, these men are to hold schools of instruction for the members of every fire and police department in our State, thereby building up a truly strong unit for fire and police defense.

What has been done in regard to Disaster Relief? This phase of defense has started with the women of our state. A two weeks' course of instruction has just been completed at the Farmington State Normal School. This school was attended by outstanding women from every county in Maine, each county being represented by three or four women. The courses offered were Motor Corps, Canteen, Home Nursing, Warden, Red Cross, First Aid, Standard, Instructors, Organization, Gas Defense, and Air Raid Precautions. After meeting the scholastic requirements of these courses, the women were awarded certificates, enabling them to return to their respective communities and start a civilian organization. They will require the voluntary services of nurses, nutritionists, home economics teachers, dietitians, secretaries and directors of such organizations as the Y. W. C. A., dressmakers, auxiliaries, church organizations, Girl Scouts, stenographers, bookkeepers—every woman and girl, whether she be in a profession or not, will certainly have her part to play in this organization for Civilian Defense.

Each County Coordinator has chosen a Municipal Chairman in every town, city and plantation in his county, to organize in his own community a chairman of Police, Fire and Disaster Relief. The Disaster Relief organization will have sub-committee chairmen on Survey, Rescue, Medical Aid, Shelter, Food, Clothing, Transportation and Communication, Registration and Information, Fund Raising and Public Information, Central Purchase and Supply. This set-up, with the permission of the national association, has been adopted from the plan of The American Red Cross, and for its organization the Municipal Chairman will require the voluntary services of civil and mechanical engineers, architects, real estate brokers and agents, physicians, contractors, garage mechanics, boatmen, hotel managers, restaurant proprietors, merchants, railroad officials, trucking and taxicab company officials, amateur radio operators, officials of telephone and telegraph companies, newspaper editors, druggists, ex-service men, and men trained in life saving and first aid. Every man and boy will be given a chance to do his part for Civilian Defense, even the small boy with his bicycle, for he can carry messages from one important point to another.

How can small children help? They can assist at home. Each small task they undertake and master well, will give their parents that much more time to devote to this great emergency, and in their own small way, these American citizens of tomorrow will be starting now to defend their country.

With the cheerful, voluntary cooperation of every individual in this State of ours, we shall not be lacking in our organizations for Civilian Defense. As Governor Sewall, in his Proclamation, stated, "Perhaps the more serious phase of Civilian Defense will never be necessary. Let us hope so, but should it come LET US BE PREPARED."

Civilian Defense is a new problem. It was created by modern methods of warfare which mini-

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. Just what is inflation and how can it be minimized?

A. Inflation is a decrease in the buying power of the dollar caused by a rising cost of living. This, in turn, is brought about by a heavy public demand, resulting from a rapid increase in the national income, for things which cannot be produced in large enough quantities. Every citizen can help minimize inflation by buying Defense Bonds and Stamps.

Q. How can I get cash for my Defense Savings Stamps if I should need to redeem them?

A. Go to any post office. NOTE: To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Also Stamps are now on sale at most retail stores.

THIS WEEK IN DEFENSE

Summarizing Information on the Important Developments of the Week Made Available by Official Sources.

The Navy announced the destroyer Kearney was torpedoed while on patrol duty near Iceland. The boat was able to proceed under its own power and no casualties were reported. The President told his press conference the vessel was clearly within American defensive waters when attacked.

Arming of Ships

The House passed a bill modifying the Neutrality Act to permit arming of merchant ships. Navy Secretary Knox told his press conference the Navy is ready to put guns aboard American merchant ships as soon as Congress authorizes the action. He said there are sufficient guns for all merchantmen, although not all can be used against both airplanes and submarines. He said arming merchant ships will slow down submarines and impair their marksmanship because they will have to stay below the surface and use their limited supply of torpedoes instead of attacking with shellfire.

Lend-Lease Aid

Navy Secretary Knox announced two overage submarines are being transferred to Britain under the lend-lease program. The President announced lend-lease transfers during September reached a record $155,000,000 in equipment and services—about three times the monthly average of the past six months. The President said aid is going to Britain, China, South America, and the refugee Polish and Norwegian governments. Russia, he said, is paying in gold and strategic materials for supplies sent to that country.

The President reported only 5 percent of the original $7,000,000,000 for lend-lease remains unused. The House voted $5,711,000,000 for further lend-lease activities.

Production

Price Administrator Henderson speaking in Detroit said although the U. S. is producing 35 percent more than ever before—45 percent more than in 1929—only 12 to 14 percent of national income is going into defense. He said America is giving only one hour of eight for defense work. Although OPM schedules show this will be increased to two out of every eight hours by next June, he said Hitler is using five of every eight hours for German war efforts.

OPM Research Chief Stacy May, speaking in New York, reported spending for defense in September rose to approximately $1,347,000,000—$203,000,000 higher than August. He said Hitler could be beaten if the U. S. shifted 50 percent of its productive capacity to armaments and suggested a $50,000,000,000-a-year defense program.

The War Department announced medium tank production almost doubled in September as compared with August, and light tank production showed a "good gain." Congress passed legislation authorizing a $1,500,000,000 increase in RFC borrowing and lending power to be used partially to expand steel producing facilities by 10,000,000 tons at a cost of $1,000,000,000. OPM ordered auto production for January, 1942, cut "at least" 51 percent below last January levels.

The Navy instructed its officers to impress on companies behind schedule on ordnance contracts the necessity of speeding deliveries even if it means working three shifts seven days a week until caught up. The Department asked manufacturers who can increase production by revising their contracts to start negotiations at once.

Subcontracting

The OPM Contract Distribution Division announced large defense orders will be withheld from firms refusing to farm out a sizable part of the work. The announcement said small business must be mobilized quickly because more than 60 percent of all industrial workers are employed by firms having less than 500 workers each.

The War Department reported a 105 mm. howitzer was successfully built from parts made by a refrigerator firm, an oil-well supplies manufacturer and a railroad car builder none of whose employees had prior cannon producing experience. The Navy reported as an example of its subcontracting policy that 75 small shops in New York State are working on parts for naval gun mounts.

Priority Unemployment

The Federal Security Agency asked all employees who anticipate lay-offs due to shortages to report their problems at once to the nearest State Employment Office—the first step in obtaining Government action to give plants defense orders. The Agency said State Employment officers have already surveyed 200 plants threatened with shortages and made reports which may result in placing of defense orders to prevent unemployment.

Agriculture

The Agriculture Department reported the farm labor supply at 64 percent of normal and 25 percent below last year, and said farmers have been able to keep their hired men from taking industrial jobs only by sharply increasing wage rates. The Agriculture Department announced national prospects for all crops improved about two percent during September indicating one of the largest total farm yields on record. The Department said farmers do not need priority orders to purchase farm machinery except special classes, because ratings are assigned to manufacturers and warehousemen who supply farmers.

Prices

The Bureau of Labor Statistics index of 900 wholesale prices remained unchanged during the week ended October 11 although in the past year average wholesale prices have risen 17.3 percent and are the highest since early 1930. Price Administrator Henderson notified tire manufacturers he "would not object" to advances in consumer list prices on tire and tubes to not more than nine percent above June 16 levels. He also announced an investigation of crude oil prices because of suggested price increases.

Priorities

Priorities Director Nelson extended priority assistance to virtually all industrial plants needing maintenance and repair parts. The order was in line with SPAB policy of keeping all industrial machines in good running order. Mr. Nelson suspended until March 31, 1942 the aluminum operations of the Central Pattern and Foundry Co., Chicago, because it allegedly diverted aluminum to non-defense uses such as the manufacture of slot machines. Mr. Nelson also imposed rigid control on certain chemicals, including some used for dry cleaning.

Ships and Oil

The Maritime Commission awarded contracts for construction of 49 tankers which it said will be part of the largest and most modern tanker fleet in the world. Including those building or ordered by the Commission and private interests, 298 new tankers of 2,190,360 gross tons will be finished by the end of 1943 bringing the total available to 568. The Commission reported launching this week of two more of these tankers and also adopted a program calling for construction of 15 reinforced concrete barges suitable for carrying oil.

Pan-American Relations

Secretary of State Hull issued a statement "that the U. S. has had no connection direct or indirect with the recent Government changes" in Panama. The U. S. and Argentina signed their first trade treaty since 1853. The Army seized 18 planes bound for Peru from Canada because of "the increasing critical situation.... (and) needs of national defense."

Army

War Secretary Stimson announced the Army has adopted a new semi-automatic carbine to replace the present .45 calibre pistol. The new weapon will allow 33 percent additional firepower. Mr. Stimson also announced 2,000 junior officers of the National Guard will be transferred to the Air Force for ground duty to free flying officers for air duty. The Army announced formation of four new Coast Artillery Barrage Balloon Battalions each with 1,257 men.

Where the Pilgrims Worshipped

THE CHURCH OF THE PILGRIM FATHERS, dedicated to the memory of those Londoners who sailed to America on the Mayflower, was recently destroyed in an air raid. The church, which stood in one of the older sections of London, was built in the early 17th Century and actually numbered some of the founders of New England among its original members. Photo shows part of the damaged nave, looking toward the altar.

YES, LADY, we know you were well brought up. You say "Please" and "Thank you" and use the right fork and write the nicest bread-and-butter letters. But when it comes to your conduct while driving, you most definitely could learn manners from a truck driver.

Truck drivers are good drivers. They keep on their side of the road, they don't go at fantastic speeds, they practice that fundamental rule of democracy and good breeding: Give the other fellow a break.

Which is more than can be said for many of our nicest ladies and gentlemen. A strange transformation takes place when they sit behind a steering wheel. They ignore the comfort of friends riding with them. They disdain the rights of people on foot. They yell boorishly at drivers who displease them.

Many who wouldn't touch a nickel that belonged to someone else flaunt all law and order when behind a steering wheel, with the callousness of experienced criminals.

The serious part of this curious behavior is that bad manners make bad driving, and bad driving makes accidents and death.

So mend your manners and become a good citizen even when driving. It may save your life.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1941.

American liberty is a religion. It is a thing of the spirit. It is an aspiration on the part of the people for not alone a free life but a better life; and so I say to you people of the world, I think I know the heart of the American people. I have lived among them; I know them well. And despite the occasional hesitation and doubts, the American people will reach out, will give their utmost to see that this precious thing we call liberty shall not disappear from the world, either in Europe or in Asia or in America.—Wendell L. Willkie.

You pay half of what you earn (in England) to the government and you don't argue about it. And the socialism of democracy begins to operate automatically. — Miss Gordon Holmes, British financial expert.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Easy to take—just a short time exposure with the camera on a firm support—this shot is part of a charming birthday series. Keep your camera busy on birthdays; they're fine for pictures.

SOONER or later, every member of a family has a birthday—and here is one occasion when you can really turn your camera loose for a first-rate story-telling series of pictures.

Of course, the center of a child's birthday is the cake with candles. That's why we picked it for our picture here. But there's a lot more to a birthday—anybody's birthday. The preparations—the presentation of gifts—the party, if there is one—all these make good snapshot material. If it's a child's occasion, with your small son or daughter playing the leading role, you can start taking pictures several days in advance—pictures emphasizing the good behavior that always precedes the big day.

The idea, in making a series of this sort, is to tell a complete story. The more details you can show, the better your story—and it's more satisfying when you look back through your album.

Here's what I mean by "details." Suppose it's Dad's birthday, and you're giving him a new pipe. Then get one picture as he receives the package; another as he begins to unwrap it; a shot of his expression when he sees the gift; another as he loads up for the first time; and a final shot as he contentedly puffs away. This is clearly much better—and far more interesting—than just one shot, or several all alike.

It's quite as simple to take a series as a few "single" shots. Just set up your two photo lights—and as long as your subject stays in the same spot, the exposure won't change. So, all you need do is watch for changes in pose and expression. The photo bulbs and high speed film make snapshots easy. A shot of the cake, lighted only by the candles, will call for a short time exposure—say two to three seconds—with the camera placed on a firm, solid support.

Maybe there isn't a birthday at your house this week, or this month. But tuck this away—and when the day comes, remember your camera, and get a good birthday story. It's perfect material for your "family history" album.

THE RANGER'S COLUMN

H. C. Waldo

—Androscoggin District Ranger—
White Mountain National Forest
MT. WASHINGTON claimed its first victim this year when Carl Fiberland, 27, of 188 Durnell Avenue, Roslindale, Mass., succumbed on the Caps Ridge section of Mt. Jefferson, Monday, October 13, 1941.

Haberland was in a party of nine, seven men and two women, bound from Jefferson Notch to Crag Camp. The day was very stormy with snow, rain and strong winds and the mountain was covered with ice. From conflicting reports it is difficult to determine when they first encountered trouble but it appears to have been somewhere to the east of the summit of Jefferson. Fatigue began to creep up on the party and they decided to turn back. Haberland, clad in shorts, was most seriously affected, having trouble with weakness in his legs. He had a pair of slacks in his pack, at the time but refused to put them on.

Finally Haberland stumbled and fell and members of the party helped him for some distance until he became completely exhausted and collapsed at a point near the first "Cap" above timberline on Caps Ridge Trail. The other members of the party finally got him under the shelter of overhanging cliffs and into a sleeping bag and then six of the party started down the mountain for aid, arriving at the village of Jefferson about midnight. Mr. Adams, Carter and two friends, one a medical student, started immediately to bring Haberland out but he had succumbed before they arrived at the scene of the tragedy. As there was nothing else that could be done the two people who had put in the death vigil were helped down the mountain.

The Forest Service was contacted and Assistant Ranger Bennett organized a crew of CCC enrollees from Peabody Camp under Foreman C. E. McDougal and they together with Bennett and Guards McLain and Smith left Gorham at 8:30 a. m. and returned with the body at 2:30 p. m.

Death was due probably to a weak heart and exposure. Another solemn warning for would-be mountain climbers to heed the caution sign posted on all trails traversing area above timberline which read as follows:

WHITE MOUNTAIN NATIONAL FOREST

This is a fine trail for hiking but be sure you are in good physical condition, well rested and fed and have sufficient clothing, emergency food and equipment. Travel above timberline is hazardous. Climatic changes are sudden and severe at all seasons.

ANCIENT AND HONORABLE ORDER OF SQUIRRELS received an increase in membership of 1386 persons during the summer months of 1941 when that number of people visited one of the four primary lookout towers on the Androscoggin District on days that the lookout man was on duty. Many more people visited the towers on class 1 days when the lookout was off the tower.

Dolly Copp Recreation Area played host to 49,450 campers, 10,951 picknickers and 12,740 swimmers during the past season. These figures show a considerable decrease in use over the preceding year, probably due largely to increased employment and fear of gasoline shortage. Glen Ellis Falls was viewed by 55,756 visitors.

ROUND MOUNTAIN GRANGE

Round Mountain Grange, No. 162 met for their regular meeting Monday evening as had been previously announced this was to be a "Hobo" party which it proved to be. The costumes of all were very amusing as well as appropriate.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Six men traveled the Chougamau trail in the wilds of northern Canada. Six men died. They were reported drowned in the rapids. Murders around the camp fires expressed other things. Garry Finlay, whose brother Bob was one of the six, Red Malone and Blaise, a half-breed guide, in the line of survivors, arrive to investigate the deaths. Finlay had received an anonymous letter stating that the men were murdered. There is a suspicion that Isadore, big fur man, has made an important gold strike in the Waswanipi country and will stop at nothing to keep prospectors out.

CHAPTER II—The inhabitants are in terror of Isadore and his right-hand man, Tete-Blanche.

CHAPTER III—On the second day out, as they had safely passed the worst of the rapids, the three investigators were ambushed from shore. Garry and Blaise were slightly wounded.

CHAPTER IV—From Indians Blaise learned ten days later that there is much excitement among them over a "big bird" from the south, and that there is talk that three men perished in the rapids.

CHAPTER V—Finlay and Malone visit Isadore in his magnificent home. A sly attempt to poison them is frustrated by a clever trick by Malone.

CHAPTER VI—Wabiston, chief of the Montagnais, tells Finlay that the six men who lost their lives on the Waswanipi were shot, and talks of a "bird" that makes a loud noise.

CHAPTER VII—Wabiston shows Finlay the grave of his brother Bob. Garry identifies the remains and notes the absence of a ring that Bob always wore. Garry learns that Tete-Blanche is hunting him.

CHAPTER VIII—The Indians have been stirred up to believe that the survivors' transit is an "evil eye" that is causing sickness among their children. Finlay gets a note from Lisa, daughter of Isadore, with whom he has fallen in love, imploring him to help her escape from Isadore, whom she fears. Garry has a decoy.

CHAPTER IX—Garry meets Lisa in response to her appeal. He is surrounded and knocked unconscious by Isadore's men after killing three of them.

CHAPTER X—Garry recovers consciousness tied to a tree and suffering from insect bites. The dog, Flame, chews through the leather thong and releases him. Later he is found by Malone and Blaise.

CHAPTER XI—Finlay receives a note from Lisa protesting her innocence of the ambush, and warning him that his depends upon his leaving the country at once.

CHAPTER XII—The three men visit the Hudson's Bay post, and meet the trader, McNab, tell him of their mission, and that they really are Northwest Mounted police. Malone falls in love with Thelma McNab.

CHAPTER XIII—Finlay, Malone and Blaise hide in the loft when Isadore arrives at the post. They overhear him offer stock in his company in return for his help in misleading the police.

CHAPTER XIV—Later they land on an island and are attacked by Indians under the influence of whiskey supplied by Tete-Blanche.

CHAPTER XV

It was soon evident that the big lake, more than sixty miles in length, with its deep bays and countless islands, was being searched from the mouth of the Waswanipi River to the Quiet Water for the men who menaced Isadore's future.

Almost daily as they lay hidden in the willows and alders of some island or point of shore the man on guard sweeping the lake with his binoculars would pick up a canoe hunting for signs of the camp of the men Isadore and Tete-Blanche had sworn should never see August Darling no longer to remain within reach of the post, with the chance of hearing from Lisa. Finlay had left a letter under the quartz rock on the beach and moved up the lake.

By the time they returned from the medicine making, if they did return, Blondell would be at Isadore's. Brooding over the situation of the desperate game Finlay drove his nails deep into his calloused hands. But he was helpless. She was gone and had her gun. God bless her! He writhed at the thought of breaking his word. She'd be frantic. She might even lose faith in him. But there was no way out. At the night rendezvous with Wabiston Blaise and his chief had formed a plan of action when the Montagnais met at Kinebik's medicine lodge. The lives of the police party hung on the success of this plan. He and Red would have to be there to back Blaise in his attempt to break Kinebik's hold on the Indians. He could not desert Blaise. So Finlay had left the note.

One day in early August they were camped in a maze of islands at the mouth of a deep bay. Garry and Red were asleep in a stand of young spruce with Flame beside them while Blaise kept watch on the shore.

By day they always slept, for they knew if their camp was located any attack would come on a black night when it would be easy to approach by water.

For hours through the long afternoon Blaise's binoculars had covered the lake beyond the islands but had picked up no tell-tale flash of a dripping paddle. At last he muttered, "I go back and see w'at dat lazy Red doin'." He got too much sleep, already.

Crawling back from the thick shore scrub Blaise found his friends snoring peacefully under their cheesecloth canopy, secure from the swarm of black flies which hovered over them. His small eyes wandered in search of the airdale whom he had last seen sprawled near them tethered by a braided thong which he would not chew so long as he could lie near his master. But the dog was missing.

"By gar, dat dog chew dat leash and go somewhere and navare make a sound. Now why he do dat? He is smart chien, dat Flame. He smell or hear someth'ing for sure."

Blaise reached for his Lee-Enfield which stood against a tree, glanced at the .45 he carried in a belt holster and left his two sleeping friends. Circling the camp he managed to pick up the dog's trail, lose it, and find it again. At last he came out on a mud beach. Over it the unmistakable tracks of Flame led straight to the water. Two hundred yards away lay another island heavily timbered with scrub spruce, birch and poplar.

Concealed inside the shore brush Blaise stopped to consider the situation. "Dat dog swim straight to dat island," he ruminated. "De ar it move from dere to here and he smell someth'ing, for sure."

The airdale had followed no game into the water for the beach was unmarked except by Flame's feet. Something had led him to chew the raw-hide thong and investigate, without warning the sleeping men.

Therefore, reasoned Blaise, the dog could not have been excited or thought them in danger. If he had caught the wind of Montagnais on the other island he would have waked the sleeping men at once, for the airdale could wind an Indian at a half mile. No, it was some unusual game smell that baffled him; something that had aroused the dog's curiosity but had not irritated him. He was not gagged because he was tied up and had been trained not to bark when tied. But when he finally struck game on the island he would let go that bark of his. That would be bad.

Now what was the dog doing over there all this time to keep so quiet? The problem was too deep for Blaise to solve offhand. And he was worried. Something strange had happened.

Something so unusual that it called for action. It might involve their lives. Flame might even be dead, already, if the Montagnais had discovered the camp and were waiting for night to come across the strait and knife them in their sleep. Yet Flame had not wined Montagnais on that island. If he was dead he had been killed suddenly before he could bark. What could have happened?

Blaise Brassard determined to investigate.

Retracing his steps he shouldered the Peterboro hidden near the camp and made his way through the scrub to the mud beach. Then with his rifle across a knee he padded to the island and found the tracks of the airdale on a narrow beach. Caching the canoe in the brush Blaise started to follow the dog's trail into the heart of the timber. He had traveled less than a hundred yards from the shore when he suddenly squatted while his narrowed eyes roved the thick forest growth about him. Lifting his head his nostrils caught a pungent odor in the air. Then his gaze fell to the birch shoots in front of him. Reaching, Blaise drew the shoots toward him and sniffed at the green, scalloped edged leaves which glistened as if smeared with oil.

"Beaver castor!" he muttered. "I bin smellin' dis all de way from de shore. Dat w'at make Flame swim to dis island—beaver castor."

"Beaver castor!" he repeated, rubbing his square chin, his swart face wrinkled in thought. "No beaver on dis island!" Slowly the slits of eyes widened as a solution of the mystery began to crystallize in Blaise's active brain. He moved on through the undergrowth and, shortly, found more birch shoots with leaves smeared with the pungent oil, from the glands of the beaver, widely used by Indians as a game lure at trap-sets and carrying an irresistible appeal to the furred and shaggy owners of fang and claw.

"De are here, on dis island!" he murmured. "De use dis castor to draw de dog ovair here and kill him. Den dey come tonight. He navare get dere wind, w'en he come, becuz dey smear de beaver castor on demself. All poor Flame smell is de beaver."

Blaise Brassard was doing some hard thinking. Lured by the scent scattered over the low sprouts Flame was already somewhere in the center of the island and probably dead. He would not give him up until he went in there and had a look.

Silently following the trail of Beaver castor smeared at intervals on low bush, like a fox stalking wood-mice, Blaise worked through the timber into the heart of the island. At length the timber began to thin out and Blaise reached the edge of a natural clearing. What had become of the dog? Hidden in a clump of seedling spruce which commanded a view of the opening Blaise waited. Where were the Montagnais who had enticed the dog to his doom?

Blaise had waited for some minutes in his "hide" when he chanced to glance at the sky and notice an eagle circling high above the break in the timber.

"W'at dat fallar see, down here?" Blaise muttered. "He got his eye on someth'ing. Is it de dog?"

Wings spread, the eagle drifted down in wide spirals while the man in the spruce watched, his heart sore with knowledge of what the bird's movements meant. So it was "a'voir" to poor Flame! The eagle was making his last circle preparatory to landing in the spagnum, when, with a thin whistle of fear, he wheeled in the air and flapped away over the spruce tops.

"Ah-hah!" The cocked Lee-Enfield covered the center of the clearing. "Someth'ing scare dat eagle from landin' out dere! W'at was it?"

Convinced that Flame lay stiff in death out there in that spagnum moss, crunched in a trap or dead-fall, Blaise started to circle the clearing. Shortly, as he crawled, he came upon the unmistakable trail of the dog leading into the moss, and moose-trail tracks in soft soil leading away from it.

Reckless with wrath and grief for his friend Brassard rose and walked boldly from cover into the patches of moss and Labrador tea. Halfway across the open space he found what he had dreaded. Under the heavy drop-log of a dead-fall lay Flame's limp body.

Lured by the irresistible scent of the beaver castor the gallant airdale had followed its trail directly to the dead-fall. With a groan Blaise dropped to his knees beside the dog he had loved from puppyhood.

"Flame!" he muttered. "W'y you do dis, Flame? You poor chien! Blaise, he navare forget you. He navare—"

Brassard was lifting the drop-log of the dead-fall, easing the dog's body, when he suddenly caught his breath. "By gar! Dat dog is warm, yeh!" His swiftly groping fingers sought the dog's breast ribs and explored his neck and spine. "Dat log not break his neck or back!" he gasped in his joy. "And his heart—it beat! He still live! De drop-log crack him on de head, by gar, and knock him out!" Blaise's ear pressed against the shaggy ribs. "For sure! For sure, Flame! Dat old heart, she go good!" Brassard's fingers touched the dog's skull. "Dere it is! Right on de head! Big lump dere! It hit you on head, not de back or neck, and de tick moss save you, by gar!"

Because the builders of the trap of logs had been careless in removing the thick carpet of moss on which it stood, the dog's neck and back had not been crushed by the release of the drop-log when he reached the bait of moose meat smeared with beaver castor. Instead he had taken a glancing blow on the skull which had knocked him out.

Reaching, Blaise took the inert body of his friend into his arms and laid it on a soft bed of moss. Then the overjoyed man rubbed and kneaded the circulation back into the iron frame. At length the dog's legs twitched and his blood-shot eyes met those of the man for an instant of recognition. The stub of a tail lifted and fell. Shortly the airdale struggled to get to his feet, but sank back on the moss where Blaise's hand restrained him.

"Quiet, now! Take your time, boy! By gar, it is good to see you alive! Bad crack you take on de head. Blaise stay wid you right here until you not so dizzy, eh?"

After a space Flame again insisted on getting to his feet. Blaise watched the dog slowly regain his equilibrium, shaking his head in an attempt to clear the mists from his brain. At last Flame's strength began to return, for he no longer reeled as he walked about Brassard whose roving eyes covered the edges of the clearing. When Flame began to show interest in the smeared bait of the trap and his nostrils quivered as they caught the seductive aroma Blaise felt that the dog could make the trip back to the canoe. He picked up his rifle and, followed by Flame, left the clearing.

As they entered the thick timber there was a warning rumble from Flame. He leaped past the surprised Brassard, fell, recovered and roared his airdale challenge as two bodies catapulted into Blaise's back hurling him headlong to the ground. As he fell and instinctively rolled from the weight of the men on his back the half-breed tore the .45 from its holster. A hand gripping a knife drove past his neck and buried its blade in the leaves. Blaise caught the Indian's wrist and with a wrench had the writhing body beneath him. Clubbing the .45 he bludgeoned the Montagnais into unconsciousness. Leaping to his feet he saw the injured airdale drive at the second Indian's legs, edge a knife thrust as the Indian backed away, then leap again as the Montagnais reached for the rifle which had slipped from Brassard's hands when he was struck from the rear.

Indian and airdale rolled over and over in the brush, the dog slashing with his long fangs as the other tried to use his knife. With a leap Blaise reached them and the clubbed .45 struck again. Holding the maddened dog off the stunned Indian Blaise swiftly bound his hands and feet with strips of his shirt, and repeated the operation on his companion lying unconscious a few yards away. A quick examination proved that the raging Flame had escaped with a surface cut. Picking up his rifle Blaise and the dog started for the canoe.

"You tink I am crazee not to shoot dose fallar, Flame?" the man said to the dog at his side. "If I shoot dat old .45 we have t'ree-four, mebbe ten-twenty on our heel before we reach de canoe. Dere are plenty Montagnais across de islan' waitin' for night. You and Blaise now go wake up Red and Garry and start up de lake, tout suite, w'en dark comes."

Crossing the strait with the dog Blaise carried the canoe to the camp and waked his sleeping friends. "Wal, you fallar sleep pretty hard w'ile Flame and me make a little trouble for ourself."

"What d you mean by spoiling a nice afternoon nap, you old—say, who tore your shirt?" demanded Malone. "Where'd you pick up all that dirt on that handsome face of yours? What you been trying to do while we were asleep?"

Blaise gazed benignly down on his startled friends. "You wake up quick w'en you hear."

Flame was nuzzling at Garry's neck when the blinking eyes of the latter suddenly widened. "What in thunder you been into, Flame? You're cut and what's that damned smell on you? I've got it! Beaver castor! Red, smell of that dog! He's smeared with it! And what happened to his head, Blaise? He's been struck with a club." Solicitously Garry examined the scratch of the knife and the swollen head of his dog.

When Blaise had told his story of the missing dog, the log dead-fall set in the clearing and the fight, the three friends ate and prepared to leave the island in the early dusk. There was no doubt that their camp had been discovered and that the Montagnais had been confident of luring the dog across the strait and into the dead-fall with the beaver castor. Without the airdale to smell or hear them a night attack could be made on the camp with small chance of discovery until the Indians struck home.

"Blaise, you and Flame are two lucky devils," said Garry, as they lay hidden in the shore alders waiting for the rose tints to fade from sky and lake and the dusk to mask their movements. "Both of you walk into trouble and both of you bob up smiling. But my guess is that when those two Montagnais you left bound at the clearing are found by their friends we may hear something. Queer they didn't have their guns with them when they tried to ambush you!"

"W'y dey carry gun? Dey sure dey find Flame dead in de trap. Dat is all dey come to de clearin' for. W'en dey saw me dey hide and tink dey put a knife in my back. But I jump w'en Flame yell and fool dat knife."

When dusk fell a Peterboro drifted through the shadows like a wraith, bound for the head of the lake where, in the full of the moon, old Wabiston and Blaise Brassard had an appointment with Kinebik, the shaman.

As they traveled with muffled strokes of the paddle the thoughts of the two Mounties were far from the grim business that brought them again to the head of Lake Waswanipi. Red Malone was deep in dreams of a girl with red-gold hair who was praying for him, far in the west, at Matagami. Garry Finlay was wondering if Lisa had found his letter—if Blondell's plane had arrived. At the thought of her, at Isadore's, alone, waiting for his return, the mad desire to turn back and go directly to the fur post and bring her away drove him close to desperation. But he stoically paddled on into the night, for the lives of many men hung on his mission at the head of the lake.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—keeps heavy on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

SOUTH PARIS 14—GOULD 7

After playing a deadlocked first half, South Paris defeated Gould Academy 14-7 here last Thursday afternoon, by intercepting a pass in the third period, and turning it into a touchdown. The game was a feature of the dedicatory exercises for the new Gould Academy field house. South Paris held a 14 to 0 margin on first downs.

South Paris marched 48 yards for the first touchdown in the first period, with Prince scoring, and Brown rushing the point. Prince of South Paris was outstanding throughout the game, both on defense and offense.

Gould came back strong in the second period. Ireland kicked out of bounds on the Paris 11 yard line, and on the next play, the visitors lost 10 yards, then kicked into the wind. The ball was downed on the South Paris 32 and here Gould started a drive which in seven plays saw Captain Ireland cross the goal line and Littlehale rush the point.

The final tally came in the third period as South Paris intercepted a Gould pass on the 23. The visitors failed to gain on the ground, then a Prince to Farnham pass, completed on the goal line, gave South Paris the edge. Stearns kicked the extra point.

For Gould, Hawkins, Abbe and Littlefield were outstanding in the line, and Captain Ireland played a bang-up game in the backfield.

RED CROSS APPEAL

Twelve ladies put in a good afternoon's work on Red Cross work in the Legion Rooms on Tuesday. Their latest assignment is to make 65 boys' shirts of warm material furnished from headquarters. The total of the work already done is an imposing one, when it is remembered that most of the summer only a few workers appeared. Just now the work is slowed up rather seriously by having only the one electric sewing machine. The ladies have wondered if there might be someone in the village who has a machine—the old treadle type would be very acceptable—that might be loaned to the Red Cross for use as long as needed. Anyone willing to lend a machine would kindly communicate with Mrs. Ernest F. Bisbee, the Vice-President.

FARNSWORTH HOUSE

the architect, Randolph Evans of New York City; of the enthusiasm and great interest of Dr. Farnsworth in the recognition of which the building is named.

Mr. Thurston, in accepting the building, touched upon the Academy's history; of its progress through the years; of Dr. Nathaniel T. True, whose ideals meant so much to the development of the Academy in its early days and of the contributions to its academic growth by Dr. Frank E. Hanscom, its principal for nearly 40 years. Gould Academy, he said, has undergone a transition from a school of one building, some 60 pupils and a faculty of five to the present institution comprising eight beautiful buildings, 250 students and a faculty of 20. He spoke of the benefactions of Mrs. Marian True Gehring, daughter of Dr. True, an of her unfailing interest in the Academy and the community.

In the brief speaking program at the Bethel Inn luncheon Mr. Park paid tribute to Dr. True; to his daughter and her husband, Dr. John G. Gehring; and Mrs. Gehring's son, Dr. George Bourne Farnsworth—three generations interested in the progress of education and in the progress of Gould Academy. He spoke of the growing interest of William Bingham, 2nd in the school during the later years of Principal Hanscom's long administration and his increased generosity which has made possible Gould's beautiful modern buildings.

Dr. Farnsworth spoke of the privilege he has had to teach and enjoy his profession. He said he felt richly rewarded by the contacts he has had with youth and the opportunities he has had to help youth obtain new possibilities for self fulfillment and service. His greatest satisfaction, he said, lies in the satisfaction that comes to him in being of service to youth and to a certain community.
